DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1, 2, 4, 5, 9-13, 16-22, 26-32, and 38-39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent No. 4,805,222 to Young et al.

3. In regards to claims 1, 11, 12, 20, 22, 30, and 38, Young discloses the word Login as an example of a user password in figure 1. Young discloses the differences between the time, which may be called, keystroke dynamics and represent the different time patterns which are derived from an individual's typing (Young: column 4, lines 3-18). Each letter typed in the password in figure 1 meets the limitation of "a password segment." The actual letter meets the limitation of "a predetermined entry signal" and the time between the key depressions meets the limitations of "a predetermined time interval following said entry even; and a terminating signal follows said predetermined time interval." (Young: Figure 1). The security access monitor stores the time periods and the number of characters in the character string being analyzed. The actual characters in the character string may also be stored (Young: column 2, lines 53-67).

4. In regards to claims 2, Young discloses that if the difference between the creator's keystroke dynamics and the claimant's keystroke dynamics is beyond permissible amounts, referred to as "thresholds," the system may deny access to the computer (Young: column 3, lines 1-15).

5. In regards to claims 4, Young discloses that the password consists of alphanumeric characters (Young: column 2, lines 27-29).

6. In regards to claims 5, 9, 10, 13, 16-19, 21, 23, 26-29, 31-32, 39, Young discloses measuring the time interval from the edge of a first entry event to the trailing edge of a next second entry event (Young: figure 1).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

7. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

8. Claims 3, 6-8, 14-15, 23-25, 33-37 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 4,805,222 to Young et al as applied to claims 1, 2, 4, 9-13, 16-22, 26-32, and 38-39 above, and further in view of U.S. Patent No. 5,241,594 to Kung.

9. Young does not disclose an online connection to determine whether the password attempt from the online connection matches the stored password. Kung discloses a server that controls access to the entire distributed system (Kung: Abstract). The user establishes communications with the server from the workstation and the user ID ad password is authenticated (Kung: column 4, lines 34-37). This meets the limitations of “an online connection to determine whether the password attempt from the online connection matches the stored password.”

10. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modified the system of authentication with a password as disclosed by Young with the method of authentication with a password between a server and computer as disclosed by Kung in order to access a remote host without the additional requirement of inputting a user ID and password of the remote host computer (Kung: column 4, lines 46-48).
